Early voting begins for the 2022 General Election

Photos by Rob Burgess / Plain Dealer

Voters turned up Tuesday, May 3 to one of five vote centers in Wabash County, including Zion Lutheran Church.

Here's a look at the candidates who may appear on your ballots

Indiana Secretary of State Holli Sullivan announced Wednesday, Oct. 12 is the first day of in-person early voting in Indiana for the 2022 General Election.

Over the next 28 days - from Wednesday, Oct. 12 to Monday, Nov. 7 - Hoosiers may vote early in person before General Election Day, said deputy secretary of state Rachel Hoffmeyer.

All registered Indiana voters are eligible to vote early in-person. Voters who need to cast their ballot by mail may request an absentee ballot online at www.indianavoters.com or from their county clerk's office. Requests for absentee ballots by mail must be delivered by Thursday, Oct. 27.

More than half of Indiana counties now offer vote centers, which allow voters to cast a ballot at any polling location in their county.

Hoosier voters can go to www.indianavoters.com to view a sample ballot and check their voting locations and hours for early voting. A valid photo ID is required to vote early in person.

Here is a look at the local, state and federal candidates who may appear on your ballots:

U.S. Senate

Thomas M. McDermott, Jr., of Hammond, is running on the Democratic ticket.

McDermott took office on Jan. 1, 2004, and was Hammond's first Democratic mayor in 20 years. He is the longest-serving mayor in the city of Hammond's history and is currently serving a fifth consecutive term.

James M. Sceniak, of Greenwood, is running on the Libertarian ticket. He is a behavioral therapist who is a native of Goshen.

Incumbent Sen. Todd Young, of Greenwood, is running for re-election on the Republican ticket. A former member of the U.S. House of Representatives, Young was first elected to the U.S. Senate in 2016.

McDermott, Sceniak and Young will participate in a debate at 7 p.m. Sunday,

A lack of many contested races and dreary spring weather didn't keep primary election voters away from the polls Tuesday, May 3.

Oct. 16. The one-hour debate is sponsored by the Indiana Debate Commission and will be the lone debate featuring the three candidates. The debate will originate from the studios of WFYI in Indianapolis. It will be carried on multiple television and radio stations statewide. A live feed will also be available by visiting IndianaDebateCommission.com.

Available write-in candidates include Thomas Baer, of Terre Haute; Philip Beachy, of Fort Wayne; Haneefah Khaaliq, of Gary; David G. Storer, of Crown Point; Danny Niederberger, of Carmel; and Antonio

Xavier Alvarez, of Highland Park.

McDermott and Khaaliq were also guest speakers at recent Wabash County Democratic Party meetings. However, on Feb. 18, the state election commission, which is made up of two Republicans and two Democrats, voted to remove one Republican and two Democratic candidates from the May primary ballot for U.S. Senate for failing to meet the state requirement for filing petitions signed by at least 500 registered voters from all nine congressional districts by the Feb. 4 deadline, according to the Associated Press. The commission's decision removed Niederberger, an accountant from Westfield, the third weekend in August, raised $45,000, which was a record amount.

The Dave Kunkel Cruise-In is an annual car show that is open to cars and trucks, both classic and late model.

The 2019 event raised $38,000. The 2020 Kunkel Cruise-In had been scheduled for Aug. 14 and 15, 2020, but the pandemic had other plans.

"COVID canceled us last year," said Chapman, in 2021.

Chapman said Dave Kunkel was a native of the Wabash area and a victim of ALS.

"Always ready to assist in worthy causes, Dave was well known and respected in Wabash as a man who could be counted on to help in any way he could. It is in his honor and spirit that his family and friends organized the Dave Kunkel Cruise-In," said Chapman.

Chapman said "there are lots of cars," more than 400 every year.

"Cars and trucks are judged, and great prizes are awarded in numerous categories," said Chapman.

Stouffer said the new space will provide "easy access to rooms during the snowy winter months for smaller groups already using the Clubhouse."

Stouffer said the 2022-2023 Luncheons and Programs will be held the second Tuesday of each month from through June 2023.

"The Clubhouse board thanks the community for their support and continued participation in activities at the historic clubhouse building," said Stouffer.

The list of programs and events is available by visiting <http://www.wabashwomensclubhouse.org> in the "Event" or calling 250-563-4391 and leaving a message for a program to be mailed.

"We will again offer Mary's Second Lunches that offer fun activities for you to participate in," said Stouffer.

Stouffer said special events

the Woman's Clubhouse has planned this season will include "some unique gatherings."

"The Fudge Fundraiser will be offered again," said Stouffer.

Stouffer said fudge orders may be placed through October to be delivered Friday, Nov. 11 at the Woman's Clubhouse "or we will deliver."

Call 260-571-5339 to place fudge orders.

A Special Christmas Dinner Fundraiser will be prepared at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 8 with an auction, an Ellen Stouffer painting giveaway and entertainment.

Reservations may be made by calling 619-990-7088.

Stouffer said a "feast of sight and smell will be offered with a Chocolate Buffet" at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 9.

"You will experience a truly decadent table of chocolate desserts," said Stouffer. "The Clubhouse will feature melt-in-your-mouth chocolate indulgences, chocolate drink specials, and chocolate from various chocolatiers across Indiana for you to purchase. Should you want to eat downtown first, a couple of participating restaurants' receipts will provide you with a percentage off on your ticket to the Chocolate Buffet. Or life is better with chocolate, so just plan to come to the Clubhouse and eat dessert."

Stouffer said members will pay $12 and non-members $13 for lunch this season. In August, the Woman's Clubhouse opened its doors for its annual Gene Stratton-Porter Birthday Party held in honor of the "famous, beloved author" who was born on Aug. 16, 1863, on a small farm near Lagro. This was the first event the Woman's Clubhouse held since Carol McDonald, who led the group for 26 years, announced she was stepping down from her position in July. On Tuesday, Oct. 11, their monthly luncheon was hosted by the MSD retired teachers, who presented, "We Are Never Too Old For Dolls."

Robbie Coltrane, Harry Potter’s Hagrid, dies at 72

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Robbie Coltrane, the baby-faced comedian and character actor whose hundreds of roles included a crime-solving psychologist on the TV series “Cracker” and the gentle half-giant Hagrid in the “Harry Potter” movies, has died. He was 72.

Coltrane’s agent Belinda Wright said he died Friday at a hospital in his native Scotland, and did not immediately offer other details. She called him “forensically intelligent” and “brilliantly witty” in just one of many tributes made to him.

“Harry Potter” author J.K. Rowling, who decades ago had said Coltrane was her first choice to play Hagrid, tweeted Friday that he was “an incredible talent, a complete one off.” “I was beyond fortunate to know him, work with him and laugh my head off with him,” she wrote.

Born Anthony Robert McMillan in Rutherglen, Scotland, Coltrane was in his early 20s when he began pursuing an acting career and renamed himself in honor of jazz musician John Coltrane.

He already had a notable screen career, with credits including “Mona Lisa,” “Nuns on the Run” and Kenneth Branagh’s adaptation of “Henry V” when he broke through on his own as a hard-bitten detective in “Cracker,” the 1990s TV series for which he won best actor at the British Academy Television Awards three years running.

He went on to appear in all eight “Harry Potter” movie as the young wizard’s mentor and had a wide variety of other parts, including a Russian crime boss in the James Bond thrillers “GoldenEye” and “The World is Not Enough” and Pip’s guardian Mr. Jaggers in a 2012 adaptation of Dickens’ “Great Expectations.” More recently, he received rave reviews for playing a beloved TV star who may harbor a dark secret in the 2016 miniseries “National Treasure.”

On Friday, his “Nuns on the Run” co-star Eric Idle tweeted that he had been talking about Coltrane, “wondering where he was,” when he learned of his death.

“Such a bright and brilliant man. A consummate actor, an extraordinarily funny comedian and an amazing actor. He was also a very good friend,” Idle wrote.

organization through times of growth and helped to shape its culture, centered around world-class teamwork and excellence. He also led the health system through challenging and uncertain economic conditions, including the Great Recession and, most recently, the COVID-19 pandemic,” said Brigle. “Committed to Parkview’s mission and to meeting the growing healthcare needs of the region, Packnett helped the health system grow from 50 providers and 6,300 co-workers to more than 1,000 providers 14,000 co-workers across 16 counties, serving patients through more than 3 million encounters each year.”

Brigle said during Packnett’s tenure, Parkview expanded into Wabash, Kosciusko and DeKalb counties, opened Parkview Regional Medical Center, and added specialized cancer care with the Parkview Cancer Institute.

“Mike Packnett has served Parkview Health, as well as the northeast Indiana and northwest Ohio region, in the best way he knows how – for others,” said Parkview Health Board of Directors chairman and Do it Best CEO Dan Starr. “He is an incredibly humble and compelling leader who has spent years cultivating a culture focused on delivering compassionate care. He has also nurtured partnerships with numerous organizations in the region to help improve community health and access to care as more individuals seek a Parkview experience.”

Brigle said as a community leader, Packnett has been an integral part of several regional development initiatives, including transformational investments into the revitalization of downtown Fort Wayne with both Parkview Field and Electric Works.

“He is also a passionate advocate for the advancement of the southeast Fort Wayne community, supporting efforts underway to improve access to healthcare and early childhood education. His spiritual influence is seen in his work with the City-Wide Movement and Love Fort Wayne, aimed at creating a renewed spirit and sense of unity,” said Brigle.

Packnett currently serves as a board member for several organizations, including Manchester University, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, Central Indiana Corporate Partnership, Northeast Indiana Regional Partnership, Indiana Hospital Association, Orlando Health and more. Earlier this year, he was named to Indiana 250, the Indianapolis Business Journal’s list of the 250 most influential business leaders in Indiana.

Rick Henvey, president of healthcare operations, will lead the organization as CEO starting in January 2023.

wouldn’t be where we are today without him, and we could not have a better person to serve as our next CEO. I look forward to seeing how Rick will continue to improve and enhance the many ways we serve northeast Indiana and northwest Ohio.”

Henvey has served on several community boards, most recently for Trine University, Northeast Indiana Boys and Girls Club, Indiana Chamber and the Regional Chamber of Northeast Indiana.

“Henvey is known for his strong, forward-thinking approach to leadership. He has been instrumental in growing Parkview’s services across the region, and his focus on service excellence has led Parkview to be known as a best place for providers to practice, co-workers to work and patients to receive care,” said Brigle.

Brigle said Parkview was recently named by Forbes as one of America’s Best Employers By State for Indiana. “The power of Parkview comes from our 15,000+ providers and co-workers, who are our most valuable resource, along with the passion and desire they bring each day to serve others. As we’ve grown, Mike and Rick’s participatory leadership has been key in helping us transform and deepen our culture,” said Parkview Health chief administrative officer Dena Jacquay. “Our region has been uniquely blessed to have both of these remarkable leaders together for the last 16 years in helping instill the drive of excellence in every interaction we have with those we serve.” “As we say here at Micro-pulse, it is hard to replicate culture as it is such a precious resource. Mike, Rick and the leadership team have done a tremendous job in building and fostering the culture that exists today across Parkview and in delivering the brand promise of excellent care to every person, every day,” said Parkview Health Board of Directors member and Micropulse CE and founder Brian Emerick.

Local orthopedic provider and healthcare leader Alan McGee, MD, is president of Orthopedics Northeast (ONE) and also a member of the Parkview Health Board of Directors.

“Rick’s deep relationships, collaborative approach and drive to increase physician-led leadership will continue to provide Parkview and the community with opportunities to advance in new, innovative ways, and continue the legacy that has been created over the last century,” said McGee. “Rick’s commitment to excellence, both within Parkview and in our community over the last 16 years, is felt in his relationships with individuals, providers and partner organizations. His ability to bring stakeholders together to find new, innovative solutions and create connections puts Parkview Health in a strong position for enhancing growth, improving access and using modern digital solutions to help navigate care.”

DAILY SCRIPTURE

For the law of the Spirit of life has set you free in Christ Jesus from the law of sin and death.

Romans 8:2

The law says that Florida governor is a swindler

Too often in today's America we approach nearly everything from the lens of partisan politics.

However, in the real world – you remember the real world, we used to live it all the time before we were convinced to hate each other – most of the time, actual issues boil down to serious matters of laws and public policy, not political posturing.

With that mind, let's ponder the laws of the United States of America, Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis' apparent lack of knowledge of those laws, and his repeated habit of behaving like a snake-oil salesman to mask his own ignorance and lawless delusions.

DeSantis used taxpayer-funded time and dollars to recruit asylum seekers in Texas to fly on a privately chartered plane to Martha's Vineyard to make a political statement.

While we have strong opinions about the morality of using exhausted and powerless asylum seekers as pawns in games of political showmanship, let's just focus on the facts.

The DeSantis flights had 48 migrants on board, including men, women and children. Most of them started their transcontinental journey in Venezuela, a country governed illegitimately by the tyrannical dictator Nicolás Maduro.

The characterization of Maduro as a tyrannical dictator is not a matter of debate, politics or speculation.

Human Rights Watch, Amnesty International and the Robert F. Kennedy Human Rights organization have all documented instances of torture, arbitrary imprisonment and extrajudicial killings of people who speak out, in any way, against the Maduro regime.

In January 2019, the Organization of American States (OAS) passed a resolution "to not recognize the legitimacy of Nicolás Maduro's new term" as president.

And between August 2019 and March 2020, then-U.S. President Donald Trump signed an executive order to impose a total economic embargo against Venezuela and indicted Maduro and the chief justice of the Supreme Tribunal on charges of drug trafficking, narcoterrorism, and corruption.

That Venezuelans are persecuted, tortured, and murdered by the Maduro regime are facts that Republicans, Democrats and independents alike agree on in the United States.

U.S. federal law allows people attempting to escape violent political persecution to come to the United States to seek asylum. If they surrender themselves to immigration officials immediately upon entry, they are legally allowed to enter and live in the country temporarily while they await a hearing on their claim of asylum. If they follow the required processes and procedures, their legal right to be here is not a matter of opinion or politics, it is a matter of law.

And, as a matter of fact, the vast majority of the 48 Venezuelans who DeSantis' flew to Martha's Vineyard had all followed the correct procedures. They had escaped persecution, torture and near-certain death. Until a judge rules otherwise, they have a legal right to be in the land of opportunity and begin to build new lives.

So it made sense that when they arrived in the U.S., they were greeted warmly by a woman named Perla. According to the migrants, she offered them a free trip to Massachusetts, three months of rent, assistance with getting their asylum paperwork in order and a guarantee of work.

They agreed. She took them to a San Antonio hotel for four days and gave them meals. They were then flown to Martha's Vineyard.

The rest is history. The Venezuelans' arrival on the island was a surprise to everyone involved except DeSantis and Perla.

The left denounced the flight as shockingly immoral while the right, including DeSantis himself, defended the decision by saying that they are simply making good on the promises of "sanctuary cities" that invited the migrants and are best equipped to serve them.

In fact, since the infamous flight, DeSantis has repeatedly justified his actions by invoking the words "sanctuary cities." But either DeSantis is delusional or he doesn't understand what the words sanctuary city actually mean – a blunder of epic proportions for a man spending millions of dollars in taxpayer money on a campaign highlighting that exact phrase.

Legally, sanctuary cities limit their cooperation with the federal government's efforts to enforce immigration law. Here in the United States, sanctuary cities are legally allowed to decline to work with federal immigration officials under the constitutional principal of federalism, which expressly gives states the right to spend their money as they see fit.

What we must remember is that sanctuary cities are only applicable if a person is in the country illegally, because the lack of cooperation with federal law enforcement is only relevant if a person is breaking the law. The Venezuelans weren't. They were in the United States legally, sanctuary city or not.

It also means that when the migrants accepted Perla's offer of three months' rent, a guaranteed job and a flight to Martha's Vineyard, Perla – and by extension, DeSantis – entered into a legally binding contract.

The "Contract Law 101" page of the University of Texas at San Antonio website – yes, the exact city and state where Perla made the offer – describes how a legally enforceable contract requires the following elements:

1. An offer. If you get on this plane, I'll give you lodging and a guaranteed job on the other end.
2. An acceptance. Sounds great, you've got a deal.
3. Mutual consideration. Perla provided temporary lodging until the plane was ready and the plane flew to the Vineyard.
4. Legal parties. The people involved in the contract cannot be legally barred from entering into the agreement.

5. The contract cannot further a criminal purpose such as illegal immigration. Legal purpose.

As you can see, in this case all the elements of a legally binding contract were met. That means DeSantis owes 48 Venezuelan immigrants three months of rent and some form of employment. And to their credit, the migrants are suing him for fraud.

Moreover, DeSantis owes them an apology.

His failure to fulfill his end of the bargain is no better than that imaginary Nigerian prince offering to share his country's riches if you simply email him your bank account information and send $5,000 to cover his expenses. Except DeSantis' deception is even worse. He intentionally sought out people escaping torture and death, used them to get what he wanted, and delivered none of his promises to them in return.

And those are the facts. Not politics. Just the law and the facts.

Please vote yes for the MSD referendum

I was blessed to serve as a teacher and administrator in MSD for 20 years. Throughout my time in education, I and my fellow teachers and administrators worked hard to prepare our students for the opportunities and options for their educational, employment or public service choices upon graduation. We always listened to the concerns of our parents about the best options for their children and we welcome the active involvement of our families relative to their educational choices.

Now, I am asking for help. On or before Tuesday, Nov. 8, you and other residents of our community will have an option that rarely happens – you can decide the future of our Wabash County schools. After number of community meetings and the approval of a strategic plan designed to forecast the future needs of our schools, our locally-elected school board approved placing a referendum on the Tuesday, Nov. 8 ballot.

The proposal on the ballot will make a difference for our community and the 2,276 students enrolled in our schools. We will provide our students and our teachers with upgraded state-of-the-art teaching facilities will make considerable safety upgrades and will renovate two schools in our community. These improvements are the kinds of solid investments that will protect our tax dollars and save you and other residents from paying for constant repairs to aging buildings. Another major benefit is that better school facilities lead to increased property values. That benefits all of us.

Our teachers work each day to provide outstanding educational options to all of our students. Having a new high school and renovated facilities will help us retain our teaching colleagues and will help us recruit additional outstanding teaching staff in the future.

Like you, I am concerned about the costs of things. The Tuesday, Nov. 8 referendum is the right decision at the right time for our community. Costs will never be any cheaper and the need for quality educational facilities continues to increase. This is your chance to make a difference for this and future generations who live in Wabash County.

Please vote yes for the MSD referendum. It is the right choice, for all of us.

HISTORY

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Saturday, Oct. 15, the 288th day of 2022. There are 77 days left in the year.

Highlight in history:

On Oct. 15, 1966, President Lyndon B. Johnson signed a bill creating the U.S. Department of Transportation.

On this date:

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte, the deposed Emperor of the French, arrived on the British-ruled South Atlantic island of St. Helena, where he spent the last 5 1/2 years of his life in exile.

New legislation will provide help to more victims of violent crime

Violent crime is a social ill that negatively impacts millions of people every year in the U.S. While considerable resources are devoted to crime prevention at the local, state and federal levels – and justifiably so – it's important that we do everything in our power to lift up those impacted by violence.

Before being named director of the Indiana Criminal Justice Institute, I managed the state's Victim Compensation Program and worked with hundreds of crime victims. Two things became apparent after listening to their stories:

1. Every violent crime has a tangible and intangible cost.
2. The impact of violence can be generational and extend beyond the individual to friends, family and communities.

Crime affects everyone differently and finding a resolution can be a challenging journey. Often, in cases involving bodily injury, such as sexual assault or domestic abuse, the emotional and psychological wounds can persist long after the physical injuries have healed.

There's also the financial hardship, or tangible cost, associated with crime. Not everyone has insurance and very few are in the financial position to cover the cost of reconstructive surgery from a gunshot wound or dental work from a physical assault. For those living paycheck to paycheck, making a full recovery might mean taking time off work.

In the aftermath of a crime, the last thing we want someone to worry about is money, but the reality is, for many, that ends up being the case. That's something the Victim Compensation Program works to address.

Established in 1978, the program with items such as medical bills, funeral costs and counseling services, in certain circumstances.

The program is designed to compensate those who, at no fault of their own, were victimized by a violent crime that resulted in bodily injury, so the focus is on the most heinous crimes. The incident must have occurred within the past two years and be reported to law enforcement within 72 hours, although some exceptions apply like in cases of sexual assault.

There are other requirements such as the victim being innocent of the crime, but if eligible, claimants can be reimbursed up to $15,000 in cases involving bodily injury. If the criminal act resulted in loss of life, the family of the victim may be eligible for an additional $5,000 to recoup funeral and burial expenses.

While on the subject of reimbursement, it's important to keep track of documentation associated with the crime, especially out-of-pocket receipts, because that's something we'll ask for during the application process.

When it comes down to it, even if we can't cover the total cost of the crime, every little bit helps, and I've seen firsthand the difference it can make in someone's life. In the past two years alone, more than $1.8 million was awarded, benefiting hundreds of families in Indiana.

aims to reduce the financial impact of crime on victims' lives so that they can focus on their recovery. Compensation, which typically comes in the form of reimbursement to providers, can be used to help

Now, thanks to recent legislation, the program is better positioned than ever to help those in need.

Under the new law, which went into effect on July 1, costs associated with crime scene cleanup and the replacement of windows or door locks are now eligible for reimbursement. In addition, family members of victims who have paid a portion of funeral or burial costs and children who were eyewitnesses to the crime but were not physically injured are now also eligible.

The legislation also removed a common barrier to sexual assault victims receiving compensation.

Currently, claimants are required to report the crime and cooperate with law enforcement as part of the process. Now, victims who have had a forensic exam are eligible for compensation, whether or not they choose to involve the police.

I want to personally thank State Rep. Sharon Negele for authoring this legislation and the entire General Assembly for putting the needs of victims first, but our work is far from over.

We continue to hear from claimants who we could've helped had they known about the program sooner. That's something we're working every day to prevent and is the reason we launched the Hope & Help campaign last year and continue to devote considerable resources to building awareness.

Ultimately, we wish these resources weren't needed, but people need to know they exist in the unfortunate event that they become a victim of a crime.

Even if you don't need it, there's a chance, someday, you might know someone who does.

A deadline is looming for Public Service Loan Forgiveness waiver

Marta Maldonado started with $100,000 in student loans for her graduate studies. After 16 years of chipping away at that debt, she still had a staggering $91,000 left to pay

Michelle Singletary

“I figured I would be paying this debt until the end of my life,” the associate professor of ethnic studies at Oregon State University said in an interview. “It’s like a life sentence.” Maldonado said she tried several times to determine whether she qualified for the federal government’s Public Service Loan Forgiveness (PSLF) program. The complexity of the program was overwhelming, she said. PSLF was created in 2007 to encourage public service work for a qualifying employer, such as a government agency or a not-for-profit university. After 120 qualifying monthly payments, the remaining balance of a borrower’s debt is forgiven by the federal government. The “qualifying” part of the promise has long tripped up borrowers. Through missteps and misdirection from loan servicers, many borrowers discovered that their years of payments hadn’t counted toward loan forgiveness. Borrowers like Maldonado thought they were well on their way to forgiveness, only to find out they didn’t qualify after all because the type of loan they had wasn’t eligible, or they weren’t in a certain type of income-driven repayment plan, or they weren’t working for a qualifying employer. Others complained their loan servicers either misled them about their eligibility for PSLF or steered them to forbearance or deferral options that kept them trapped in debt for decades. “The process was just too convoluted,” Maldonado said. “I felt really helpless.” A 2018 report from the Government Accountability Office found that the Education Department rejected 99 percent of loan forgiveness requests. Since then, the Education Department has been trying to simplify the process. As part of an effort to address problems with the process, it introduced a time-limited waiver last year that would count previously ineligible payments toward PSLF. But the reprieve will soon end. Borrowers have until Oct. 31 to apply for a waiver to receive credit for payments that previously did not qualify for PSLF. There has been so much focus on President Biden’s promise to forgive student loans up to $10,000 – and up to $20,000 for Pell Grant recipients – that some borrowers may miss the PSLF deadline, which could erase even more debt. As of late August, more than $10 billion in debt relief for over 175,000 borrowers has been given through the PSLF program, the Education Department said. You can find out more about the waiver at studentaid.gov/pslf. If you haven’t checked already, hurry to do so. You might qualify for the credit if you worked in public service dating back to Oct. 1, 2007. Maldonado said she had nearly given up applying for the waiver until her union told her about Summer, a company that helps borrowers navigate the byzantine PSLF program. Her union provided free access to Summer’s services. Summer walked Maldonado through the process of getting into the right loan program (Federal Direct Student Loan) and the right repayment plan (income-driven). Following those moves, she submitted her application to have all those years of payments counted toward forgiveness under the waiver. It took some time and patience, but the Education Department eventually forgave close to $82,000 in debt for Maldonado. The rest was in private loans, which are not eligible for PSLF. “When I finally got the approval, I just thought, oh my God, things that I had not imagined that I could do, I can, like buying a home,” she said. Many people could use the guidance Maldonado received. Fidelity Investments, a leader in the not-for-profit workplace retirement savings market, is pushing for just this type of assistance. Fidelity is collaborating with Summer to provide software and expert support to help employees in public sector jobs apply for loan forgiveness. The assistance would be part of the benefits employers offer to their workers. This makes sense. Work productivity can be impacted by workers stressed about their financial situations, such as a heavy debt load. “Student loan debt is a major challenge in the country today. We at Fidelity have been working on a number of solutions in this space,” said Debra Frey, head of marketing and analytics for nonprofits at Fidelity. A potential beneficiary is Kellie Latesky, whose employer, Bronson Methodist Hospital in Kalamazoo, Mich., is helping her with her student loans as part of Fidelity’s partnership with Summer. She just started the process. She has $88,000 in student loans that she has been paying off for 10 years. “I am excited at the idea of them helping me get a handle on all of the student loans,” she said. Without the help of Summer, Latesky looked at the process of getting her loans forgiven through PSLF, but she gave up because it was too complicated. “I was unsure of how even to proceed, so I just stopped trying,” she said. Rather than having borrowers go it alone, Summer provides access to technology and optional expert support to navigate the student loan forgiveness application process and help people check their eligibility. At this time, borrowers can only access Summer through one of its partner organizations. “There is a big gap between what the program can be and the people who are actually achieving it,” said Bridget Haile, vice president of operations and client experience at Summer. “We’re on a mission to simplify student loan debt and make forgiveness easier to achieve.” It’s great that the employers offering Summer’s services are helping their workers get the loan forgiveness they are entitled to receive. But it’s a shame this is even necessary. The Education Department is working on new regulations to improve the PSLF program. Even so, I suspect, given the history of this program, borrowers will still need hand-holding to navigate the application maze to forgiveness. Call Michelle Singletary at 1-800-Ask-Post. The disciplinary actions were first reported by The Associated Press during Morales’ unsuccessful 2018 run for Congress. Records obtained under Indiana’s public records act showed he was fired in 2009 after eight months in Republican Todd Rokita’s office due to “incomplete” work, “inefficient execution” and a “lack of focus. Fighting food poisoning: Sweeping poultry changes proposed

By DAVID PITT
Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — The U.S. Department of Agriculture on Friday proposed sweeping changes in the way chicken and turkey meat is processed that are intended to reduce illnesses from food contamination but could require meat companies to make extensive changes to their operations.

Despite decades of efforts to try and reduce illnesses caused by salmonella in food, more than 1 million people are sickened every year and nearly a fourth of those cases come from turkey and chicken meat.

As it stands, consumers bear much of the responsibility for avoiding illness from raw poultry by handling it carefully in the kitchen — following the usual advice to not wash raw chicken or turkey (it spreads the bacteria), using separate utensils when preparing meat and cooking to 165 degrees. The USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service wants to do something about it by starting with the farmers that raise the birds and following through the processing plant where the meat is made.

Their food poisoning target: Of the more than 2,500 salmonella serotypes, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has identified three that cause a third of all human illnesses from chicken and turkey products. The agency proposes limiting the presence of these on poultry products.

The USDA estimates the total yearly cost for foodborne salmonella infections in the U.S. at $4.1 billion, which includes the cost of doctor and hospital visits, recovery and premature deaths.

In 1994, the USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service took a similar step by declaring some strains of E. coli a contaminant in ground beef and launched a testing program for the pathogen which has significantly reduced illnesses from the meat.

In an effort to curtail salmonella outbreaks in poultry, the agency is proposing a regulatory framework that would include testing incoming flocks of chickens and turkeys for the bacterial disease that commonly affects the intestinal tract and affects 1.3 million people annually with symptoms that may include diarrhea, nausea and vomiting which could last for several days. Officials hope testing chickens and turkeys before they enter the slaughterhouse will encourage farmers to adopt practices that reduce the bacterial infection on the bird before they reach the point of meat processing.

A second measure would require enhanced monitoring for salmonella during processing by adopting sampling for the bacteria at multiple stages inside the processing facility. The third major change would be to establish a maximum level of bacterial contamination allowed and possibly limiting the three specific types of salmonella that can make people sick. Meat that would exceed the limits or that would contain the types of salmonella prohibited could be withheld from the market.

The USDA says there are about 3,000 federally inspected plants that slaughter poultry but about 220 produce the vast majority of poultry products. The agency said it is difficult to say at this point how many would be affected by the future rulemaking.

The FSIS will begin a lengthy process of proposing new rules by holding a public hearing on Nov. 3 to get input from the poultry industry and others. The government's goal is to come up with new rules and regulations that could be rolled out beginning next year and completed within two years.

The agency said it is taking its time to roll out these ideas and get input before establishing firm regulations. The agency hopes to begin rulemaking in mid-2023 and complete it in two years, said USDA Deputy Under Secretary for Food Safety Sandra Eskin.

"We know this is quite a pivot from where the agency has been historically and for that reason we're trying to be as transparent and deliberative and collaborative as possible," Eskin said.

Consumer advocates have pushed for such action on poultry products for years.

Eskin said the administration of President Joe Biden is pushing to make the changes.

Seattle-based lawyer Bill Marler, one of the nation's leading lawyers to represent consumers sickened by food sources applauded the agency's action which recognizes that controlling salmonella on animals before they reach processing plants is crucial to reducing meat contamination. He said FSIS should be bold and deem salmonella is a adulterant — a contaminant that can cause food-borne illness — in all meat as a starting point.

"What they've outlined is something that's really unique that they have not ever done before but it doesn't have a time line and doesn't have regulations attached that would show it's actually going to be accomplished. That's my criticism," he said.

The industry has been unable to meet government targets for reducing food-borne salmonella infections for a couple of decades. Meeting the new target set for 2030 of 11.5 infections per 100,000 people a year would require a 25 percent reduction, Eskin said.

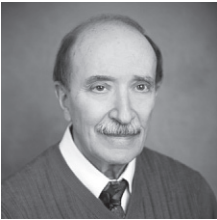

Eskin said the industry has managed to reduce the number of chicken samples contaminated with salmonella by 50 percent from 2017 to 2021, but the rate of salmonella illnesses over the last two decades has not significantly declined. More than 23 percent of foodborne salmonella illnesses are attributable to poultry consumption with nearly 17 percent coming from chicken meat and more than 6 percent from turkey meat.

Wabash volleyball poised for a championship run

The Apaches will play Rochester in the semis at 12:30 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 15

By CLAY MAXFIELD
Wabash Plain Dealer Freelance Reporter

Their record might not show it but Wabash's varsity volleyball team has been tested throughout the season and as sectionals approach, the Apaches are ready to show the fruits of their labor.

"I think we've made great strides as far as playing together as a team," Wabash head coach Katie Cromer said. "We have some new players that haven't played varsity before, they've gelled really well. We've made a few tweaks here and there. They've always adjusted really well as far as rotations and lineups. ... I feel really confident in how we're playing at this point heading into the tournament."

With one lone regular season tournament at North Montgomery High School on the schedule, the Apaches will then shift focus to the postseason.

Wabash drew the first-round bye and will await to play the winner of Pioneer and Lewis Cass.

The Apaches played Lewis Cass on Oct. 3 and defeated the Kings with a 3-0 sweep while Pioneer finished the season with a record of 25-7.

North Miami, Rochester and Winamac round out the remainder of the tournament bracket and will go into sectional 36 all with losses against the Apaches this season.

As for what Wabash needs to do to stay alive throughout the postseason, Cromer and company are focused on what they can control.

"Going into any match and I'll say this throughout however far we go, I'm so much more concerned with our side of the court and our side of the net than the opponent," Cromer said.

"We need to clean up our side and when we play efficiently and effectively, I think we can beat anybody."

In the postseason, Wabash will continue to look for stellar play from Emma Tracy (84 serving aces, 499 assists), Ashlynn Cruz (352 digs) and Bryleigh Boggs (227 digs) as well as Faryn Morris and Boggs who combine for nearly 500 kills this season.

Beginning their season by winning four out of their first six, the Apaches went on to dominate the next eight matches including a first-place finish at the Wawasee Invitational.

Moving forward, however, Wabash will lean on their four seniors in Ashlynn Cruz, Faryn Morris, Jade Stumbo and Emma Tracy the same way they have all season.

"We have the four seniors who played varsity since their freshman year so clearly they're carrying the load, especially from like keeping your composure, having been there, worked through some of those games," Cromer said. "I feel we're more athletic this season than we were last season in all of the positions so that's helpful."

Wabash will play at Rochester High School in the semifinals at 12:30 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 15.

Southwood volleyball looks to continue winning ways in sectionals

Knights will play host to sectional 53 this season, face Caston at 11 a.m. Saturday

By CLAY MAXFIELD
Wabash Plain Dealer Freelance Reporter

After winning the Three Rivers Conference (TRC) title this season and compiling a record of 23-2, Southwood's varsity volleyball team looks to stack up more championship hardware this postseason as they draw closer to a semifinal matchup against Caston.

With one regular season tournament at Maconaquah High School remaining, the Knights will continue to make the finishing touches on their game before the start of sectional 53.

As for how far Southwood has come, head coach Tom Finicle believes it comes down to players understanding their roles.

"Our players have discovered their respective roles and have also been exposed to backup roles," he said.

Throughout the season, Southwood has been led by Alaina Winer's 190 digs, 235 kills from Grace Drake and 78 aces from Alli Lopez.

The Knights began their season with five straight wins before bouncing back from a tournament loss to Frankton with 16 victories in a row including top-place finishes in the League of Legends Tournament and the Eastern Hancock Invitational.

Caston comes into their matchup against the Knights with a record of 23-6 while winning 10 of their last 11 contests.

"We will need to play extremely well," Finicle said. They (Caston) are a well-coached, athletic squad. We will need to execute well. But that is next week and we must continue to focus on daily development and improvement."

The Comets are led by Isabel Scales (165 kills, 206 digs), Macee Hinderlinder (27 aces) and Delaney Lowry (256 assists).

While Southwood's focus is initially on Caston, the opposite side of the bracket holds Southern Wells, Lakeland Christian Academy and Northfield.

The Norse drew a first-round bye but should they advance to the championship round, Southwood will face off in a county rematch that fell the Knights' way in four sets on Sept. 20.

Southwood will play host to sectional 53 this season and take on Caston at 11 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 15.

Bruce Sutter, Hall of Famer and Cy Young winner, dies at 69

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bruce Sutter, a Hall of Fame reliever and the 1979 Cy Young winner, has died. He was 69.

Sutter was recently diagnosed with cancer and died Thursday night in hospice, surrounded by his family, one of Sutter's three sons, Chad, told The Associated Press. The Baseball Hall of Fame said Bruce Sutter died in Cartersville, Georgia.

"All our father ever wanted to be remembered as was being a great teammate, but he was so much more than that," the Sutter family said in a statement Friday. "He was also a great husband to our mother for 50 (years), he was a great father and grandfather and he was a great friend. His love and passion for the game of baseball can only be surpassed by his love and passion for his family."

Sutter is considered one of the first pitchers to throw a split-finger fastball. The right-hander played 12 seasons in the major leagues, was a six-time All-Star and ended up with 300 saves over his career.

MLB Commissioner Rob Manfred said he was "deeply saddened" by the news.

"Bruce was the first pitcher to reach the Hall of Fame without starting a game, and he was one of the key figures who foreshadowed how the use of relievers would evolve," Manfred said in a statement. "Bruce will be remembered as one of the best pitchers in the histories of two of our most historic franchises."

Sutter debuted with the Chicago Cubs in 1976. The reliever won the Cy Young in 1979 in a season where he had 37 saves, 2.22 ERA and 110 strikeouts.

He joined the St. Louis Cardinals and played with them from 1981 to 1984. There, he won a World Series in 1982, ending Game 7 against the Brewers with a strikeout.

"Being a St. Louis Cardinal was an honor he cherished deeply," the Sutter family's statement said. "To the Cardinals, his teammates and most importantly to the greatest fans in all of sports, we thank you for all of the love and support over the years."

His last save, No. 300, came with the Atlanta Braves in 1988. Sutter was inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame in 2006.

Curated Christmas list leads to white elephants

DEAR AMY: Every year, I spend time carefully curating a list of Christmas wishes for me, my husband, and our children. I know what we like and need.

Amy Dickinson
Ask Amy

In turn, his family gives me their list. When it's time for presents, my in-laws happily open the gifts for which they love them!

We open our gifts, and do not receive a single thing from our list. My children receive toys they don't need and clothes I will not let them wear. Some things are regifted, while others just take up space in my house. It actually hurts that after 12 years of being part of this family, they still don't know me at all. We spend a generous amount of money on our family at Christmas, but I'm disappointed and frustrated by their lack of consideration.

Last year, I told my husband that I would only buy gifts for the children of the family going forward; I have not told the in-laws yet. The downside is that one of the siblings is childless, so they would receive nothing from us. Should I hold firm and kindly let the family know that children should be the focus of Christmas from here on out, or should I make overt hints to stick to the list and hope for the best, even if I'm disappointed (again)? – Disappointed

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Abandon the list. It's not working. It also subverts the idea of Christmas giving.

You might segue to a non-material gift for adults – donating to a charity on their behalf or giving a subscription or membership to a local museum or cultural institution. If you don't want to give any gifts to adults, in place of your list you can state: "I'm trying to cut way back on the overabundance, and so I'm going to only give gifts to the kids. Enjoying our time together is the only gift I want."

Regardless of how you frame your own wishes, you cannot control what other people give to you.

DEAR AMY: I have been estranged from my brother for several years.

I think a lot of our estrangement is based on jealousy. I believe that my brother resents my good fortune.

Our parents worked hard all their lives and left both my brother and me a pretty good nest egg.

Since retiring, I have been able to travel, do volunteer work, and make a lot of my dreams come true.

I admit that I have fewer responsibilities than my brother. Not all of his dreams have come true.

Every year at Christmas, I send out a letter describing how my year has gone, and my brother is on my mailing list.

This year has been quite successful for me.

I have taken a couple of trips, obtained a new kitten, and celebrated some milestones.

I am afraid that if my brother reads those things in a letter, he will think I am rubbing salt into a wound.

Even though he wants nothing to do with me, I don't want to hurt his feelings.

Should I send him a letter? – Estranged Sibling

DEAR ESTRANGED: If you are estranged from your brother, then why do you send him this one thing each year? Do you want to try to create something of a dialogue with him?

And if you never hear from him, you may not know whether "all of his dreams have come true."

If you simply want to remind him that you exist, and that you are enjoying your life and privileges, then you might as well send this letter.

If you do want to build a bridge with him, there are probably better ways to do it.

Generally, boastful holiday letters are less in the holiday spirit than letters that show a level of humble awareness of the writer's relative good fortune, expressed along with a genuine hope that others are also enjoying life's blessings.

You might include a handwritten note to your brother at the bottom of this Christmas letter, reminding him of a happy memory that you two share, and wishing him well in the coming year.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You should rock as the ref. A friendly outlook and fairness might make you a good choice to step in when two sides arrive at a stalemate. Lend a helping hand at an event supporting your local community.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) The moment of truth might arrive. This might be a good time to discuss and work out details with your partner. Soul searching will reveal whether your goal is attainable or an unrealistic wild goose chase.

Trump’s subpoena and what’s next for the Jan. 6 panel

By MARY CLARE JALONICK
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In an extraordinary step, the House Jan. 6 committee has voted unanimously to subpoena former President Donald Trump — a final effort to get the full story of the Capitol insurrection as the panel wraps up its work by the end of the year.

Trump still does not acknowledge the “former” in front of “president,” and he has been relentlessly hostile to the investigation. He called it a “charade and a witch hunt” in a letter to the committee on Friday — but notably did not mention the subpoena or say whether he would comply with the demand for his appearance.

The attempt to compel Trump’s testimony comes as the committee is tying together multiple investigative threads and compiling its final report. The panel is only authorized through this Congress, which ends on Jan. 3.

A look at what’s next as the panel sprints to its finish:

The Trump subpoena

The nine-member committee has interviewed more than 1,000 witnesses, including many of the former president’s top White House aides. And they have laid out a detailed timeline of Trump’s efforts to overturn his 2020 election defeat — including his inaction as his supporters stormed the Capitol on Jan. 6, 2021. But they still want to hear from Trump himself.

Now that a subpoena has been authorized — on Thursday — it must be delivered in writing to Trump. That step, expected early next week, will set a date for an interview and lay out requests for documents.

Trump and his lawyers will then decide how to respond. He could comply, negotiate with the committee, announce he will defy the subpoena or ignore it altogether. He could also go to court and try to stop it.

If Trump doesn’t comply, the panel will have to weigh the practical and political implications of a vote on holding him in contempt of Congress. If the full House voted to recommend such a charge, the Justice Department would then review the case.

The committee has taken that step with some of Trump’s allies who refused to comply with subpoenas, including Steve Bannon, who was convicted of contempt in July. But holding a former president in contempt would be another matter, an exceptional step for any Congress.

In his letter on Friday, Trump repeated his false claims of widespread election fraud and said he was writing to express “anger, disappointment and complaint” that the committee wasn’t investigating his claims. He also took the opportunity to boast anew about the size of the crowd that gathered for his speech near the White House on the morning of Jan. 6, before he sent them marching to the Capitol. He included aerial photographs. He said nothing about the subpoena.

Even if he does comply, there’s reason to doubt that Trump’s appearance would help the investigation. He did respond to some written questions from special counsel Robert Mueller during the probe of Russian cooperation with his 2016 campaign. But his answers produced little or nothing to advance the investigation. More recently, he appeared for a deposition by the office of New York State Attorney General Letitia James — but invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination more than 400 times in refusing to answer questions.

What about Pence?

The committee is still talking to lawyers for former Vice President Mike Pence, as it has been for months. But it is unclear whether the lawmakers will subpoena the vice president or ask him for testimony.

Several of Pence’s aides have talked to investigators, some providing great detail about his movements and state of mind as he resisted Trump’s pleas to object to the certification of electoral votes that day and try to overturn their defeat to Joe Biden and Kamala Harris.

Video shown Thursday at the committee’s final hearing before the midterm elections showed Pence coordinating with House Speaker Nancy Pelosi and Senate Democratic Leader Chuck Schumer for help as the rioters were inside the building, some of them calling for Pence’s execution. The leaders were working with security officials to ensure that they could return to the Capitol and certify Biden’s victory.

PUMPKINS & TULIPS

Pumpkin seeds planted in the spring produce bright orange orbs come autumn. Tulip bulbs placed in the ground in the autumn produce vibrantly colored flowers come springtime. There is another seed...the seed of faith...that may be planted in the springtime of youth or the autumn of life. Whenever faith is planted, God has promised love and mercy when we accept Him as our Father. Visit your house of worship this week; plant your seed of faith in the care of the Creator. He tends pumpkins...and tulips.
